We have gone from 42 calls in September to 28 calls in October for one individual in Cle Elum.

PERSONNEL

Stipend shifts increased from 2 to 6 this month, both individuals doing the stipend shifts have put in applications with the agency for part-time employment. There has been no interest from the other departments in participation. I will be tracking out of county transports for meal reimbursements per the new contract.

APPARATUS

I picked up M5 from Braun NW and drove it back to the Stampede Pass exit before the A/C compressor pulley broke. Braun sent a driver to pick it up and fix it again and brought it back, it seems to be working now that it is winter. I sent M7 our newest ambulance back to Braun for warranty work on their auxiliary alternator. M4 almost has 150,000 miles and continues to run well and will serve great as the backup unit until M8 arrives in March 2020.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT – Julie Petersen

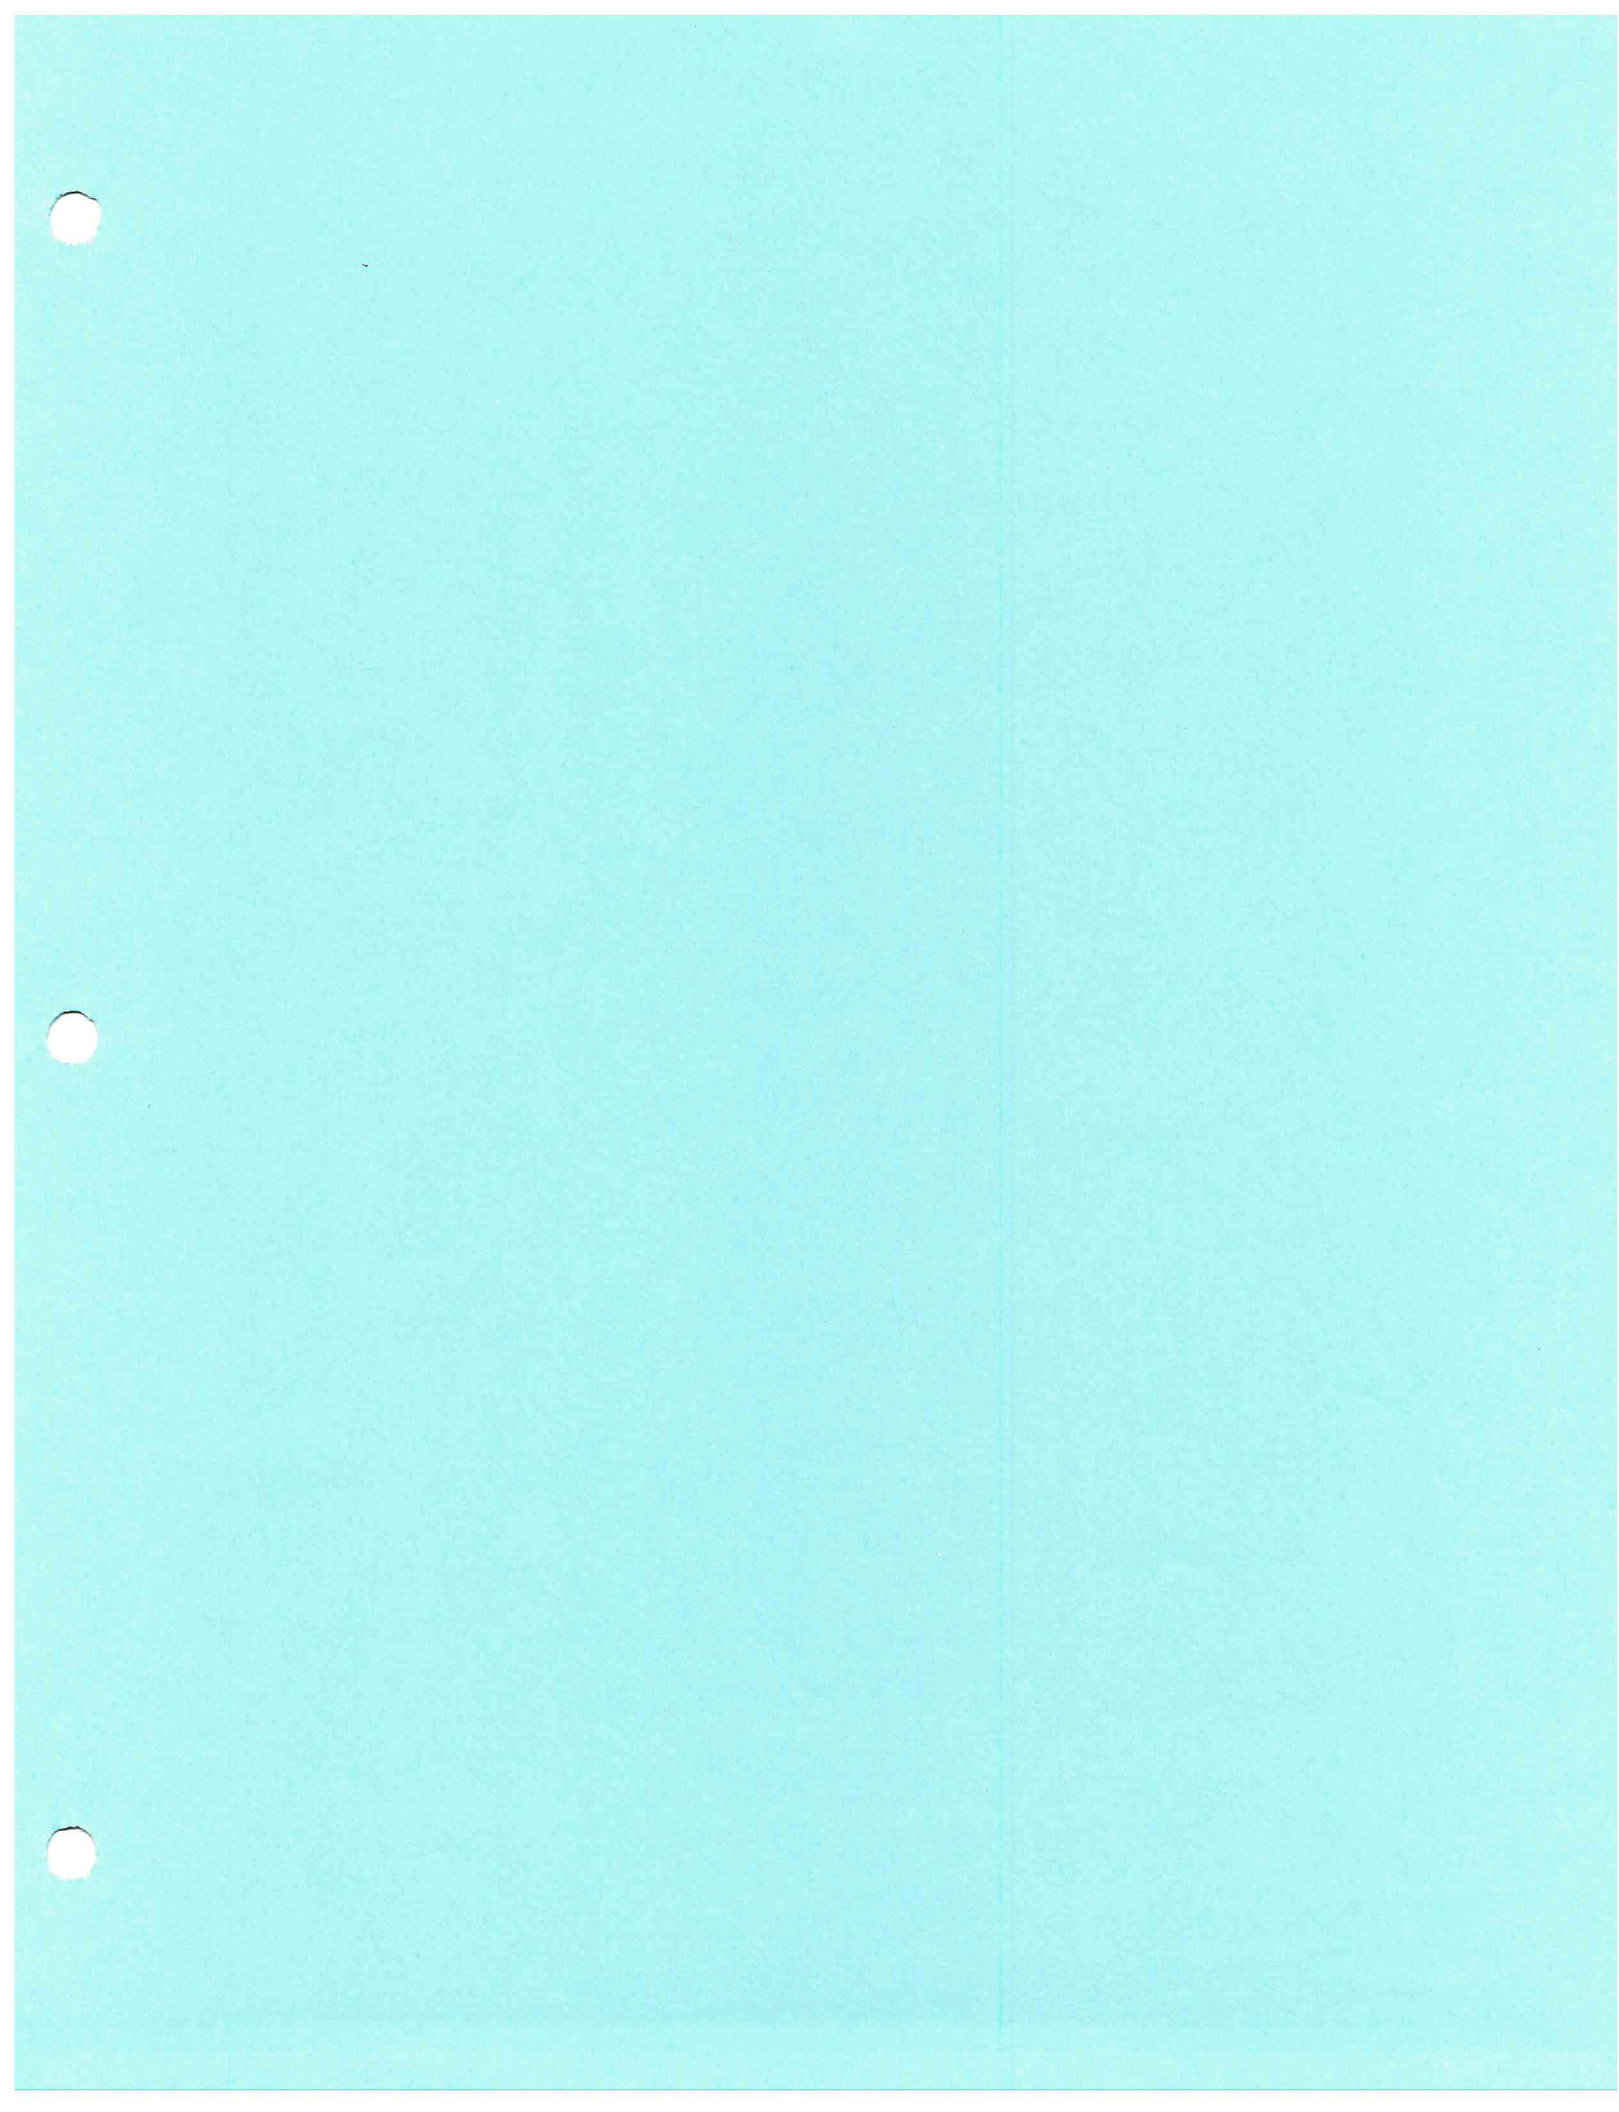

November 2019

Elections Results

Congratulations Commissioners Vatheuer, Rogalski and Becker on your election night victories. In District #1 we will be swearing in two new Commissioners. Jon Ward will be sworn in for the December 5th BOC meeting and Terry Clark for our January 9th meeting.

Letter from your Community

Officer Jacqueline Van Dongen of the Cle Elum police department wrote to let me know that she was aware of a change in policy at HD#2 that no longer allows crews to socialize, together in public when they are on duty. She expressed her belief that the opportunity to share a cup of coffee or a sandwich with our Medics and EMTs enhances Medic 1's profile in the community and helps build relationships with our sister agencies and the community members we serve.

Upper County flu shot clinic set for Oct. 26

FOR THE DAILY RECORD

Kittitas Valley Healthcare and Kittitas County Hospital District No. 2 are holding a free drive-through flu shot clinic on Saturday, Oct. 26 in Cle Elum.

The event will be taking place on the west side of Kittitas Valley Healthcare's Urgent Care Clinic located at 214 W. First Street in Cle Elum.

Individuals should enter from West Second Street and turn south on Billings Avenue. This free clinic will run from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., or until vaccines run out.

The CDC recommends a yearly flu vaccine for everyone 6 months of age and older as the first and most important step in protecting against this potentially serious disease.

In addition to getting a seasonal flu vaccine, you can take everyday preventive actions like staying away from sick people, washing your hands to reduce the spread of germs and staying home or away from school if you think you may be sick with the flu.

Cafe/ from A1

"The whole upstairs hadn't been touched since it was built (in 1911), it was that old. Almost all of the upstairs has been redone in terms of floor plan, but we've been able to retain the old-style doors, the old-style woodwork and trim and windows," he said.

"There will be four apartments. One will be a one-bedroom and the others will be two bedrooms and two baths.

"There is an elevator that goes from the apartments down to the basement garage. It also goes up to a roof deck. I feel these will be some of the best apartments in town when they're complete."

Designers are working with a 6,000 square footprint upstairs, Anderson said. The one-bedroom will be 740 square feet the two-bedroom units will range anywhere from just under 1,000 square feet to 1,580.

"The upstairs windows are identical to what they were in 1911, because those were still intact," Anderson said. "The main thing we did was move around a bunch of walls so create the four apartments. We tried to match everything as best we could. It's all new, but we brought back elements of detail."

The 5,000 square foot retail space can be developed for a variety of business endeavors, Anderson said. Since the project involves living space upstairs, Anderson said they will be selective in terms of the after-hours noise level like say a sports bar.

"Everything downstairs will be fully functioning, but we're probably not going to do the wood floors until we have someone interested. Then I'll finish to suit," he said.

In May of 2017, the city of Ellensburg Landmarks and Design Commission's recommendation was for the art moderne first-floor to be restored and the original second-floor wood framed windows to be repaired, if needed, and kept.

The art moderne elements were added in a 1938 remodel, making those elements historically significant (more than 50 years old) and based on the Secretary of the Interior's guidelines for preserving, rehabilitating, restoring and reconstructing historic buildings, those elements should be restored and maintained, if possible, rather than removed.

The state of Central

CWU president lays out new five-year goals in state of the university address

By MATT CARSTENS staff writer

According to Central Washington University president Jim Gaudino, his institution is right where he wants it — almost.

Describing an encounter with an accreditor earlier this year, Gaudino said he was told CWU was "an excellent university that is on the cusp of greatness."

Naturally, instead of taking that as a compliment, he positioned it as the motivation for his new vision for Central during his state of the university address.

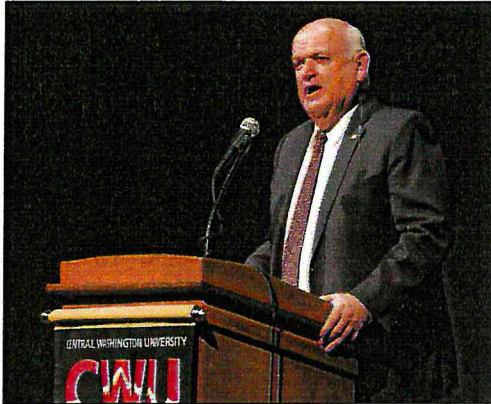

The vision also includes three goals — retention, faculty diversity and furthering the university's commitment to reducing its carbon footprint.

"That word cusp really, really bothers me. To be on the cusp, suggests we're on this side of a line," Gaudino said, then pointing to the other side, "and on this side is something so much better than we are. Should we just stand here on this side? Absolutely not."

RETENTION Gaudino's goals laid forth in his last state of the university address was to increase the institution's freshman to sophomore retention rate. Although just a one-year sample, Gaudino said it increased from 69% to 71% this year.

Gaudino said it was a remarkable achievement, but not good enough. He challenged those in attendance and watching on the live stream to keep that rate increase going every year, hitting 80 percent retention in the next five years.

CWU Vice Chair of the Board of Trustees Robert Nelams gave the opening statements, where he talked on themes of feeling "othered" as an African-American student at CWU. Reading the poem "What if We Othered Your Child and You" by Nina Miriam to open his remarks, Nelams illustrated how people of different races and cultural backgrounds often feel unable to be themselves in university settings, something Gaudino remarked as antithetical to Central's motto "Welcome, you belong here."

Gaudino said how traditional information gathering systems often toss students into groups, including ones like first generation, under represented, student athletes and more. The simple action of categorizing these students as different, Gaudino said, makes them feel unwelcome and less likely to return to the university for their sophomore year.

"Modern information and analytical systems can be so much more comprehensive," Gaudino said. "Gathering intelligent analytics not on the group, but the individual. The person, not the cluster. Individual students should become a unit. The student should be our only label."

DIVERSIFYING FACULTY AND STAFF

Along the same lines, Gaudino said he wants that university message of welcoming to articulate the vision of inclusivity.

"There are so many ways we can make welcome a reality," he said. "Some students say they question the degree they're welcome."

Gaudino said he's heard from students who wished they saw more representation among faculty, people who looked like them working at the university.

"They want to see and are encouraged when they do see and meet faculty with whom they have shared experiences," Gaudino said. "We owe them that opportunity, and we must have a diverse pool of candidates."

SUSTAINABILITY

Gaudino said upcoming generations have strong feelings on climate change and the university's policies and actions should reflect that. He listed several of the recent buildings and their energy accolades, as well as saving the university has reduced its electricity and gas consumption while the building footprint has increased.

Other accomplishments in this area Gaudino listed included diverting construction debris from landfills, saving 5 million gallons of water annually and a having a locally sourced produce from Wildcat Farms.

For these achievements, he said CWU was named a bronze institution, but challenged the campus to reduce its carbon footprint by 5% in five years, striving for a gold or platinum institution status.

"If we continue to set aspirational goals, if we always have our students' backs, we will achieve eminence," Gaudino said.

CWU Many Faces of Entrepreneurship Tourney at Kittitas

FOR THE DAILY RECORD

Central Washington University's Many Faces of Entrepreneurship (MFE) Tournament at Kittitas Secondary School will be held Friday, according to a news release from CWU.

The annual event is conducted by the CWU College of Business (CB) Institute for Innovation and Entrepreneurship (I4IE), along with continuing support from the Herbert B Jones Foundation.

"We will be working with the high school students during the morning, building different pet products with CWU student actors portraying customers," Bill Provanik, I4IE director, said. "CWU students will also portray supply store representatives and lawyers, while others will serve as mentors helping the high school students through the process of designing, building, and marketing their products."

The goal of the program is to teach students how to create, start, and successfully operate a start-up business venture.

"I4IE's mission is to make business ownership a reality for students whose backgrounds typically lack the chance for entrepreneurship as a career," Provanik said. "Our programs have already impacted thousands of students in central Washington."

Business professionals and about CWU entrepreneurship students help lead the instruction, which allows the entrepreneurship students to hone the business and management techniques needed to work with high school students throughout the time-intensive, single-day tournament.

"Our students get to experience the role of mentoring someone else through a process of developing their own commercialized ideas," Provanik said. "The Central students and business professionals will act as peer-to-peer mentors to the high school students and judge the various market plans that they prepare."

The program's initial MFE workshop in was held at Kittitas Secondary School in 2014, with 24 students in attendance. Since then, the workshop has evolved into a program connecting high school students with entrepreneurship for school districts across the state.

"I4IE's mission is to make business ownership a reality for students whose backgrounds typically lack the chance for entrepreneurship as a career," Provanik said. "Our programs have already impacted thousands of students in central Washington. That's why we're excited to be able to expand the program's reach."

For the first time, CWU's MFE tournament will also be held in western Washington. The tourney, on Nov. 13 at the Seattle Marriott Convention Center, will feature an expected 250 Highline School District students.
